Earl Grey

A classic favourite: our Earl Grey blend combines refreshing Ceylon Orange Pekoe black tea with a generous helping of bergamot oil for a distinctive citrus aroma and wonderful zesty flavour.

Moor Hall Blend

A classic "Afternoon" blend of fine black teas; light, refreshing Ceylon Orange Pekoe, rich Assam and aromatic First Flush Indian Darjeeling, prized for its hints of muscatel and known as the champagne of teas. Pairs perfectly with sweet and savoury afternoon snacks.

A tin of Moor Hall Blend loose leaf tea makes a perfect gift or memento of Moor Hall - you can buy an 80gsm tin from reception for £5.

GREEN AND HERBAL TEAS

Classic Green

Smooth, delicate Chinese Chunmee green tea that is full of flavours, without bitterness. Green tea is thought to be high in rejuvenating antioxidants.

Chamomile

Pure and simple chamomile. Full with a refreshing floral flavour, this herbal treasure is renowned for its relaxing properties. Treat yourself to a moment of calm.

Fruity Blend

Our fruity blend is brimming with vibrant berry flavours and colour, with just a hint of invigorating, zesty lemongrass. Vitamin rich and caffeine free, this blend is perfect for children too. (Hibiscus, rosehip, apple pieces, orange peel, lemongrass, natural flavour).

History of Afternoon Tea

Afternoon tea was introduced in England in the 1840s by the Duchess of Bedford, and lifelong friend of Queen Victoria. At the time, people only ate two main meals a day and finding herself peckish in the long gap between breakfast and dinner, the Duchess began inviting her friends to enjoy tea and 'a light refreshment' in her rooms at Woburn Abbey. She continued the practice upon returning to London and Afternoon Tea became an increasingly fashionable ritual among the upper classes.
